

Professor and Head, NanoEconomics Constellation

Edward M. Cupoli, Ph.D.

Dr. Edward M. Cupoli is Professor of NanoEconomics and Head of the NanoEconomics Constellation at the College of Nanoscale Science and Engineering. His research concentrates on the economic implications of nanotechnology and economic forecasting for nanotechnology, as well as the competitive position of New York State and the U.S. in the world economy.

Dr. Cupoli earned doctoral and masters degrees in economics from the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University, and received a bachelor's degree in mathematics from LeMoyne College.

His extensive experience in government and academia, as well as his close ties with the business community throughout New York State, has provided Dr. Cupoli with a deep understanding of the interrelationship between academia, business, and government. Prior to joining CNSE, Dr. Cupoli was Chief Economist and Director of Research for the New York State Assembly Ways and Means Committee, where he played a leading role in gauging and directing state and federal economic initiatives throughout New York State.

Before entering public service, Dr. Cupoli was a faculty member at Michigan State University. He has lectured at the Nelson A. Rockefeller College of Public Affairs and Policy at the State University of New York at Albany, the Economics Department at the University at Albany, State University of New York, the College of Saint Rose, and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Dr. Cupoli serves as head of the Technology Roundtable of the National Association for Business Economics. He is a member of the New York State Governor's Task Force on Diversifying the New York State Economy through Industry-Higher Education Partnerships, the New York State Deferred Compensation Board and the New York State Assembly Speakers Board of Economic Advisors, as well as a board member of the Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy Committee of the Capital District Regional Planning Commission.

Contact Information:

Edward M. Cupoli, Ph.D.
Professor and Head, NanoEconomics Constellation
College of Nanoscale Science and Engineering
University at Albany – State University of New York
257 Fuller Road
Albany, New York 12203

Phone: (518) 956-7311
ecupoli@uamail.albany.edu